Now that cholera has made its appearance on this side of the ocean the necessity for free physicians among the little ones is in-creased. They succumb more readily than adults to the ravages of disease, as the death rate on the ill-fated Moravia will show, and in crowded quarters, where pestilence is prone to appear, the services of the free doctors are doubly valuable.

This in itself should be an incentive to those who have not already subscribed to the fund to come forward at once and sdd their mite, not only for the sake of the little ones but for the good of the city. With its customary regard for the public

A Lovely Evening Gown.

An exquisite creation of white moire and now-white frestwork lace has a corselet of the moire running high at the shoulders, but deeply rounded over the bust. It is waistline length with a little point, front and back. Beneath the corselet is worn a blouse of the face gown whose long sairt reaches half way sown the gown skirt. Above the corselet the blouse makes a yoke that is gathered to a high-standing ruffle about the throat. The sleeves have moire tops finished below the cloow with ruffles of the lace.

Devilled Crabs.

There is no more tempting, toothsome dish than devilled crabs prepared in this way. Boil twelve heavy crabs forty-five minutes and four eggs for fifteen minutes. Break of the claws from the crabs, take out the spong; under the head and pick off all the meat an set it aside. Blend an ounce of butter an two ounces of flour, and after heating balt a pint of cream in a saucepan stir in the flour and butter and let it cook until it is a smooth. creamy mixture. Mash the yolks of the four eggs and pour enough sauce on them to make a thin paste; then pour into the sauce in the pan and mix thoroughly spread the crab meat on a flat dish and scap er over it a teaspoonful of sait, just a grain of cayenne, a little white pepper and a tea-spoonful of finely chopped parsley. Mix the easoning well with the meat, taking care not to break it. Having cleaned the upper shells well and rinsed in cold water, pack them with the meat, being careful to have the shell and the meat come closely together about the edge, and brush with a beaten egg mixed with a tablespoonful of water. Dust the top with fine bread crumbs and fry in very hot iard. The reason that care should be taken to cover the edge where the meat and the shell come together is that otherwise it will become fat-soaked while frying.

Huckleberry Johnny Cake.

Nowhere save in Rhode Island does one taste that dainty. The old idea was that only black huckleberries or the aweet low blues could be used for johnny cake, but modern housekeepers, if restricted to the high, softer, sourer swamp blues, add pro portionate sugar to the cake. For three or four people, take four generous teaspoonful of sifted Indian meal, half teaspoonful of salt four scant tablesoonfuls of sugar. Mix and scald with boiling water. Let stand a few moments, then thin to thick oatter with cold milk or water, stir in half a pint of huckleberries lightly, having the griddle or frying pan hot, butter liberally and not in the cakes, flattening and rounding into shape with the bowl of the spoon dipped in cold water. Bake carefully, seeing that they do not scorch. Kat with butter, or a sauce of hot cream and

First, have your water boiling hot. This is essential. Provide yourself with a commo painter's brush, with a handle about 10 inche the dish. Then tipping up one end of the diswith your finger, wash front and back with the brush. In France special brushes trimmewith thin rope about four inches long, instead of brushes, are used for this purpose.

Remember, it is not the heat of the plates but the hot water that pains the hards When this is completed the water will be to the next dish. Lift the clean dish out an place it on its edge against the wall. Put it mere hot water and perform the same opera tion on all the other dishes, and when the work is a finished you will find that the hear has dried the plates and that they do not require to be wiped. By this method you need not scald or wet your hands, and you also avoid the trouble of wiping, which is half the
